影片導讀文字：

Published in 2001, Life of Pi is a novel written by The Man Booker Prize winner Yann Martel before being made into a movie by Ang Lee in 2009.

The story is simple as the central narrative thread in Life of Pi concerns the experiences of Piscine Molitor Patel, the teenaged Indian son of a zookeeper. Due to the mockable nature of his name – which is pronounced similarly to “pissing” in French – Piscine ends up taking on the shorter nickname, “Pi.”

Eventually, Pi and his family decide to travel overseas to Canada, due to the political climate in India. However, an unexpected shipwreck leaves Pi stranded in a lifeboat with a hyena, an orangutan, a zebra, and a Bengal tiger named Richard Parker. As the young protagonist struggles to survive in his lonely drifting, he comes to an unusual perspective on spirituality (relating to Hindu, Christian, and Muslim beliefs).

In addition, a different section of Martel's Life of Pi novel revolves around an older Pi telling his mind-boggling tale of survival to a couple of Japanese maritime

1. I have ever lost friendship with someone very important recently, and it just because a very negligible misunderstanding. That must be the most distressed feeling I have experienced. Up to now They will pass one day. The elapse of time will bring them all.
2. Hide-and-seek, the most classic game of children. But the game seems to be too childish now, and we are not childish at all now. In fact, I like to be free and alone than play with friend. That will be more comfortable, I think.
3. Wit
1. I have lost my pet, a mouse. When it passed away I cried for three days and I felt very sad. It gave me wonderful memory since I feed it everyday. Sometimes when I missed my pet, I would see its photo or video.
2. In my fifth grade, I like to run after my classmates or play with them on the playground. Now I like to chat with each other for something funny.
3. I learn many things from my best friends. No matter what happen, just do your best to help your friends when they need your help.

1. I lost my college classmate, who was killed at an accident early in the morning. It took place so suddenly that I never forgot it. She was the only daughter in her family. I talked to her the day before she was run over by a truck. She rode the bicycle for breakfast. The reckless driver opened the door suddenly when she was driving past the truck. Her loud cry, "Help! Help!" was heard by so many passersby. But the cold truck driver towed my classmate who got caught under the truck. How cruel the drive was!
2. As far as I could remember, I used to play house with my friends and neighbors in my fifth grade. It was a kind of game for young children to play different roles. We were actors and actresses when we played house. I used to play the role of a teacher. At that time, I was not sure about the real reason why I liked to play the role of a nice teacher. Perhaps in my eyes, teachers were my idols! Teachers were nicer than my parents when I was a little girl.
